

Workshop Frequently Asked Questions

How long is the workshop expected to last?

The workshop is usually done in about 45 minutes. Some participants may wish to ask questions afterwards.

Who is this workshop for?

Anyone looking to make progress toward their financial goals, whether you're paying off debt, starting to invest, growing your savings, or simply trying to make informed financial decisions.

I'm unable to attend, but would like to be contacted about upcoming workshops – can I do that?

Absolutely! Please email tcu@tcu.sk.ca with your request, and we'll make sure to let you know about upcoming workshops.

Do I need investment experience?

Not at all. The workshop is designed to be approachable and relevant whether you're just getting started or already investing.

What will I take away from the session?

Practical strategies, new perspectives, and a personalized action plan to help you move forward with confidence.

Will this workshop focus only on debt?

No. The workshop focuses on the bigger picture, helping participants understand how debt management and wealth-building can work together as part of an overall financial strategy.

Will there be opportunities to ask questions?

Yes. The workshop will include interactive elements designed to encourage discussion and learning.

Is there a cost to attend?

No. The workshop is complimentary for TCU members.

I'm not sure I'm far enough along financially to attend.

That's exactly why this workshop exists. It's designed for people at different stages of their financial journey who want practical guidance and a plan for moving forward.

Will I leave with actionable ideas?

Yes. The workshop includes exercises and discussion designed to help you identify steps that make sense for your own financial situation.

Can I bring my spouse or partner?

Absolutely. We encourage anyone involved in household financial decisions to attend. Please ensure everyone is registered.

Will there be any food/beverages?

Light snacks and beverages will be provided.
